NEW INSTITUTION UPDATES/HIGHLIGHTS

Faculty of Arts

- Bachelor of Arts in Journalism, News Media, and Communication
- Bachelor of Indigenous Journalism & Communication Arts

The new Bachelor of Arts in Journalism, News Media, and Communication is a four-year integrated program across all years of a student's degree. This is a direct-entry program.

It includes the study of traditional areas of journalism like broadcasting and print, as well as digital media, new avenues for journalistic output such as podcasting, and a new focus on strategic communications. The redesigned curricula means that the program is up-to-date in terms of the changing landscapes of journalism, digital media and communications practices.

The program builds Indigenous Communication Arts and Public Relations courses into the degree, while offering more choice of electives to encourage students to take related courses in other subject areas.

All of our undergraduate students complete a paid 13-week internship as part of the program.

La Cité universitaire francophone

- Bachelor in French as a Second Language

The Bachelor of Arts in French as a Second Language is more than just language acquisition. Our program aims to guide students toward achieving a proficiency level of B2 or C1 on CEFR French tests while cultivating practical language skills for effective communication in various Francophone environments. Through a comprehensive curriculum integrating grammar, writing, and speaking skills, students explore specialised concentrations tailored to their interests and career paths. Through deep exploration, students gain insights into the histories, traditions, and nuances of Francophone communities worldwide.

Faculty of Media, Art, and Performance

- Bachelor of Fine Arts in Creative Technologies

Creative Technologies and Design is for students who have an interest in art, design, technology, culture, and interdisciplinary study. Explore digital culture while working in 3D animation, interactive media and installations, visual communication and graphic design, physical computing, creative computation, virtual and augmented reality, sound art, digital storytelling, computer gaming, and sound technologies.

Creative Technologies and Design degrees can include courses from all programs in the Faculty of Media, Art, and Performance, the Department of Computer Science, and the Faculty of Engineering, with opportunities to draw on courses from the Faculties of Arts, Education, and more.
